1. I am unable to concur in this recommendation.

2. Laying to one side the question of whether [REDACTED] superiors could have required him to use his personal property in this type of activity, and I find no direct evidence that they did, I am unable to conclude, in view of the delicate nature of the equipment involved, that the claimant took reasonable precautions for its safety. In fact, I would suppose that making a parachute jump with a camera and a light meter attached to one's neck and reserve 'chute - even though doubly fastened - is negligence per se.
